Introduction

For the women workers, however they are housewives who are difficult to escape from the family environment. Therefore, in the career, women have more burdens and obstacles in the appeal of male colleagues. In a sense, women first have to deal with the affairs of the family/husband, children and other things that carry the housekeeping. Both genders are filled by, even defined by many differences as well as social, biological, character, and theories of understanding about women. It is not surprising that there is a "gender gap", especially when dealing with the world of work. We need to identify effective steps in addressing gender issues and promoting gender equality in Indonesia and the world of work is a great place to engage in activities related to promoting gender equality.

Gender is inseparable from issues of partnership and social justice roles between men and women, who in all times have been constructed by religion, customs and culture. The story of HT, mother one of the officials at RSUD Karawang, tells the story to the author.

"I still if I have a lot of money, I am stay at home, not work, cooking out right home and plants but want to how more talent I need. I think it's cool when in fact, the head of sexy section heads but the director's job is steady" (The interview result on August 17, 2017 at 09.00 WIB)

According to Brownmiller (1975) because of that bad fate, calls women "man-made creatures" or "male-controlled creatures". Such situations are heartbreaking to anyone; we need to change the structure of thinking and perception of society towards the characteristics of women even further we
